Approximately one million Americans live with Parkinson's disease, an amount more than the combined number of people diagnosed with multiple sclerosis, muscular dystrophy and Lou Gehrig's disease. It is estimated that every year 60,000 Americans are diagnosed with Parkinson's which does not take into account the thousands of cases that are undetected. Worldwide there are probably 7 to 10 million people that have Parkinson's. Unfortunately, Parkinson's disease (PD) is a chronic and progressive movement disorder, meaning that symptoms continue and worsen over time. However, help is on the way and within the past several years there have been tremendous progress in understanding what causes PD and better treatments have been developed in helping patients to deal with it. One such approach has been devised by an Israeli, Alex Kerten who has developed the Gyro-Kinetic method that is based on the concept of movement, music, and rhythm. What differentiates this method from some of the other PD therapies is the unique blend of martial arts, structuring and healing movement. According to Kerten in his Goodbye Parkinson's, Hello Life!, which he co-authored with David Brinn, his method creates motion in the body, which stimulates simultaneously physiological, biological, and psychological reactions. As he states: "The unique combination of martial arts, movement arts, and the use of music is the distinguishing mark of the G-K method and reflects the multidisciplinary experience I've acquired during my years of training." Kerten has devoted many years researching PD and the information he presents in his book is based on these studies as well as the hundreds of individuals he has helped.
